Recently, slot tournaments have become an effective marketing strategy for online casinos. Competitions are held on a regular basis, keeping players interested in the gambling platform. What are online casino tournaments and how do they work? We propose to consider in detail.

WHAT ARE SLOT TOURNAMENTS?

In slot tournaments, the player with the most points is the winner. As a rule, tournaments are divided into two types:

Freeroll. These tournaments are free of charge and do not require player buy-in fees. They are usually used to attract loyal players and offer lower prizes than users get in paid competitions.

Buy-in. Most often, players are faced with tournaments, for participation in which an entry fee must be paid. These funds become the prize fund.

In addition, tournaments can be part of a loyalty program, as some online casinos organize special private competitions for more loyal customers who can only take part if they receive an invitation.

But how do online casinos organize tournaments? Typically, operators can start a player tournament in three ways:

if game content providers launch tournaments after a new game is released;

if the operator decides to use games from a special provider for the tournament;

if game content providers choose a specific platform and offer to host a tournament.

The tournament organizer selects a slot or several slots in which players take part.

OTHER TYPES OF SLOT TOURNAMENTS

Tournaments also differ in many parameters such as time, duration limit, etc. Some of the popular tournament types include:

Signup Freeroll. These tournaments are usually organized to keep new players interested in the casino after registration.

Sit and Go Tournament. These tournaments are organized for a limited number of players who must register for them in advance. As soon as all the seats are occupied, the tournament begins.

Extender Tournament. These tournaments allow users to keep playing even if they run out of tournament points.

ONLINE TOURNAMENTS AS A MARKETING STRATEGY

Slotegrator's online free slots marketing specialists recommend clients to use slot tournaments as a tool to promote a gambling resource and attract players. A properly conducted advertising campaign attracts new users, and the launch of slot tournaments helps to retain them and make them active visitors to the casino.

It is also recommended to post information about the winners of the tournament and the amounts they won, as this inspires other users to play.

Tournaments are an integral part of online casinos. They allow players to place bets with limited investments and compete with other players, which is much more interesting than a single player game. Ignoring slot tournaments by gambling resources deprives operators of the opportunity to attract a new audience, retain previously registered users, and increase profits. Slotegrator recommends actively using slot tournaments and is ready to assist clients in resolving this issue.
